TRANSCRIPT OF PROCEEDINGS
BEFORE THE HONORABLE CHRISTOPHER S. SONTCHI
UNITED STATES BANKRUPTCY COURT JUDGE

Proceedings recorded by electronic sound recording; transcript produced by transcription service.

1 THE CLERK: All rise.

2 THE COURT: Please be seated.

3 MR. BRADY: Good morning, Your Honor.

4 THE COURT: Good morning.

5 MR. BRADY: Robert Brady -

6 THE COURT: Before we get started, we will have to 7 take what I hope will be a very, very short break, 10 - 10:15
8 to deal with my 10 o'clock which should be resolved, but go 9 ahead.

10 MR. BRADY: Very well, Your Honor. Let me just 11 begin, Your Honor, by apologizing for the confusion on the 12 start time of today's hearing. Our original agenda said 13 9:30. I looked back at my notes from the teleconference 14 which reflected 9. We tried to file an amended agenda, but 15 it did create confusion, but I think by starting later it's 16 always better than starting earlier.

17 THE COURT: Right, well, I thought we moved it to 18 9:30 to accommodate the New York attorneys, but I don't 19 actually recall exactly.

20 MR. BRADY: With that, Your Honor, I believe first 21 on the agenda today is the motion for the formation of a 22 Borrower Committee so I yield to Mr. McCauley.

23 THE COURT: Okay, thank you. Mr. McCauley, good
24 morning.

25 MR. McCAULEY: Good morning, Your Honor. Thomas

1 McCauley on behalf of 11 different individual borrowers in 2 this case. I'm here with Stephen Weisbrod and, Your Honor, 3 we've divided the argument - effectively the parties agree 4 that there's effectively a two-part analysis, one is the 5 statutory requirement of adequate representation or lack 6 thereof, and then second is the discretionary factors that 7 the Court might consider in addressing whether to appoint a 8 committee, and Mr. Weisbrod's going to take the first part, 9 if that's okay.

10 THE COURT: Yes, fine, thank you. Are we going to 11 have evidence?

12 MR. WEISBROD: There will not be evidence, Your 13 Honor.

14 THE COURT: Okay, thank you.

15 MR. WEISBROD: Thank you for having me this morning, 16 Your Honor.

17 THE COURT: Good morning.

18 MR. WEISBROD: Stephen Weisbrod on behalf of the 19 borrowers from Gilbert Randolph LLP. I'm also here with Ms.
20 Paula Rush who is represented on this matter but not on the 21 disclosure statement and Hunter Winstead who is an associate 22 with my firm. We're here this morning because borrowers' 23 interests in estate property have not been adequately 24 represented. That's reflected in the plan, in the disclosure 25 statement, and in the way that the parties involved in the

1 case have addressed potential third-party claims and other
2 claims to date. The debtors and the Committee -

3 THE COURT: Well, let me stop you right there.

4 MR. WEISBROD: Yes.

5 THE COURT: Can you put some meat on your statement
6 just there, borrowers' interest in estate property. Can you 7 tell me what that is?

8 MR. WEISBROD: As Your Honor will recall, we noted
9 eight different problems with the plan. Of those eight, 10 seven relate specifically to how estate property will be 11 distributed in one fashion or another. The eighth, which is 12 the only one that the debtor has since addressed, is the only 13 one that dealt principally with claims by the borrowers
14 against other entities. The other seven are still problems, 15 and they all relate to the borrowers' interests in estate 16 property, how borrowers' claims on estate property will be 17 handled, how estate property will be distributed. Let me 18 begin by noting the notice problem in the bar date.

19 THE COURT: Well, wait a minute, wait a minute.
20 Let's back up again. What are the interests -

21 MR. WEISBROD: The interests -

22 THE COURT: - that borrowers have in estate 23 property. I'd like you to articulate that.

24 MR. WEISBROD: The borrowers have claims on estate 25 property because they allege that they have been victimized

1 as a result of torts and statutory violations. So they have 2 an interest in getting paid out of the estate. That's a
3 fundamental interest in estate property. Now, it goes beyond 4 that because there are non-monetary interests in how the 5 estate will be handled that also matter, but I think even on 6 the narrowest definition, and we don't completely agree with 7 the U.S. Trustee on this point or the Committee that there's 8 a distinction between claims on the one hand and interest in 9 the estate on the other. We don't agree with that 10 distinction, but even on the narrowest possible definition, 11 will you get paid out of the estate, the borrowers have 12 interests that are being adversely affected by this plan.
13 They also, of course, have interest in voting and being 14 properly informed. They have an interest in making sure that 15 their payments out of the estate are properly weighted 16 compared to other creditors, by which I mean that even if the 17 borrowers' claims were fully allowed, if other claims that 18 shouldn't be fully allowed are in fact allowed, that 19 adversely affects borrowers' interest in the estate property.

20 THE COURT: Okay. You can proceed. Thank you.

21 MR. WEISBROD: The first and most glaring issue was, 22 of course, the notice issue. The debtor and the Committee 23 apparently agreed that newspaper notice was sufficient, and 24 the debtor asserts that it was okay because they didn't know 25 that these claims existed. Well, number one, it was pretty

1 obvious that a lot of claims were going to result because of 2 the large number of foreclosure proceedings. They didn't 3 give individual notice to people involved in foreclosure
4 proceedings. They didn't give notice individually to people 5 who had particular types of loans that very frequently
6 spawned complaints. There had been even with the deficient 7 notice, 450 claims, but those people didn't all necessarily 8 get notice of the bar dates and other events in the case, and 9 as to the thousands of other borrowers there's clearly a huge 10 problem, and the debtors don't have a very good explanation 11 for this given that they had the names and addresses of all 12 these potential claimants. On top of that, and we didn't 13 even know this until we read the debtors' pleading, but there 14 is an open letter to all borrowers on the debtors' website, 15 which was still there as of last week, that says, You won't 16 be affected by the bankruptcy case. So there's actually not 17 only a failure of notice but a misleading statement made to 18 the world on this point, and that affects, obviously, a 19 borrower's ability to collect from the estate. If they never 20 submit a claim, they won't collect. The second point we 21 raised with respect to the plan is that the plan would 22 establish a conflicted trustee, and I'd like to list them all 23 first, and then go back to some individually because that's a 24 complicated issue, Your Honor. But the point briefly about 25 how the trustee issue and the trustee issue affects estate

1 distribution is that the trust is going to be able to 2 determine claims and going to be able to decide whether to 3 prosecute claims either against borrowers or against others, 4 which would affect ultimately how much borrowers recover and 5 would affect what positions the trust is taking as to things 6 like the legality of particular types of mortgages or 7 particular transactions. The third issue is the 8 classification issue. That's a classic issue of borrowers or 9 any creditor who asserts that he or she has been improperly 10 classified, has an interest in the estate, and classification 11 bears on that directly. The next issue we identify relates 12 to the treatment of financial institution claims. This has a 13 number of elements to it. Number one, how will defenses to 14 financial institution claims against the estate be addressed?
15 As we pointed out in our pleadings, Your Honor, every time 16 there is a borrower, a mortgagor, who says my mortgage was 17 originated improperly, illegally, in violation of TILA 18 (phonetical), there is a corresponding issue with the 19 financial institution claim. When the financial institution
20 claim says, American Home, you've reached your warranty to me 21 that the borrower would pay, if the borrower has a valid 22 defense based on TILA and the financial institution knew it, 23 then the borrower's claim is the claim that should be paid 24 and the financial institution's claim should not be paid or 25 should at least be discounted, I mean, I think in practice

1 all of these claims will be resolved through settlement, 2 almost all, but the point is that these are factors that have 3 to be considered. There is a matrix which involves a claim 4 form that financial institutions will fill out to request 5 money from an estate, payment on these types of claims, early 6 payment default and breach of warranty claims. We haven't 7 seen that. We don't know whether it will reflect borrowers' 8 defenses, and we don't know, ultimately, how the claims of 9 the financial institutions will interplay with the borrowers' 10 claims, and there's a big tension between who's going to make 11 these decisions and borrowers' interest here because 12 financial institutions will be the dominant force on the POC
13 and the Trustee will answer to them. The next issue we point 14 out as one of the basic issues is equitable subordination, 15 and that hasn't been addressed, as far as I can tell, in any 16 of the pleadings at all, but it's a classic issue of priority 17 here which bears on borrowers' interest in estate assets. If 18 there are some financial institutions whose claims should be 19 subordinated, subordinated either to borrower claims or to 20 all other unsecured claims, then that's an issue that will 21 affect how much each gets paid. And again, that's something 22 that ultimately might be worked out in a settlement, but it 23 doesn't appear to have been addressed, at least not with any 24 input from borrowers. The substantive consolidation issue is 25 the second to the last one that they haven't addressed, and I

1 think that there is a gut reaction to that, that, Hey, this 2 is an issue that affects all creditors in exactly the same
3 way. After all, everybody is going to be subject to a plan 4 that will not involve substantive consolidation and will 5 resolve contribution claims according to a formula. But that 6 may affect different types of creditors very differently.
7 For a bank that gets cross-guarantees from every single 8 debtor it may not matter. The bank even may get potentially, 9 I don't know the facts, but could conceivably get a hundred 10 cents on the dollar even if other creditors weren't going to 11 get that if the bank had sufficient cross-guarantees from a 12 large net number of debtors. The plan provides that no one 13 can get more than a hundred cents on the dollar, but that's 14 the cap. If you are a borrower and have a claim against only 15 one entity, one debtor, then you're affected significantly by 16 the absence of substantive consolidation because you only get 17 potentially from that one entity unless you can pierce the 18 corporate veil, which is complex litigation that most 19 individual borrowers can't undertake by themselves. So this 20 is an issue that can have a dramatically different affect on 21 borrowers and their recoveries from the estates even though 22 it theoretically treats everybody, in quote, "the same way".
23 The last point, which has not been fully addressed, is that 24 the plan dramatically affects how borrowers will prosecute 25 their claims, and the plan contains inconsistent provisions

1 on this, but I think it's important to go through it and see 2 just how dramatic this is. First, as I mentioned, there's 3 the bar date issue, but then the trust mechanism is 4 labyrinthian from the point of view of borrowers. The 5 Trustee, apparently, gets to determine the claims, at least 6 according to Article 8(f)(5) - I can't read my writing, 7 (b)(11), I think it is. The Trustee also gets to compromise
8 them. There's no clear provision that says that this Court 9 will have a role in that, but there's another provision that 10 says that certain claims can be prosecuted - not clear if 11 that includes borrower claims, but if they're going to be 12 prosecuted they must be prosecuted in the Bankruptcy Court.
13 That's very difficult for borrowers in Oregon, North 14 Carolina, Ohio, et cetera, and that's not what you ordinarily 15 see outside of bankruptcy. On top of that, the injunctions, 16 both the continuation of the automatic stay and the so-called 17 plan injunction, can have a very significant effect on 18 borrowers, and let me go through this, because I think at 19 first glance it may look like the debtors actually solved 20 this problem, but they didn't, and it's very important to 21 note how they didn't. The effects of these injunctions and 22 automatic stay are very different depending on whether the 23 mortgage is currently still held by the debtors or whether 24 it's held by a purchaser from the debtors, someone who may 25 have purchased the loan through a 363 sale. If the loan has

1 already been sold, then the so-called plan injunction 2 applies. Nobody can sue, and there's no provision in the 3 plan for getting that injunction lifted, by Your Honor or 4 anyone else. It's just flat out, nobody can sue. If you 5 look at the redline you'll see that there is an exception to 6 that injunction. A borrower can sue if the borrower is 7 subject to a foreclosure proceeding and if the foreclosure 8 proceeding was brought by a so-called protected party, which 9 means one of the debtors or the plan trustee. So if the 10 foreclosure proceeding was brought by any of the many banks 11 that have purchased loans, the plan injunction as currently 12 formulated, does not allow a borrower to sue the trust. It's 13 flat out prohibited, as I read it. Now, if the trust still 14 owns the mortgages or if one of the debtors still owns the 15 mortgages, then there is a presumptive - then there is an 16 exception, that's in the plan injunction, so the plan 17 injunction is no longer a factor. There's still the 18 automatic stay, that also is presumptively lifted, but the 19 deemed lifted language actually is not written in English.
20 It's hard to say what it does and what it doesn't do. I'm 21 sure that's just a scrivener's error, and it probably can be 22 fixed, but even if it's lifted, the action can only be filed 23 in the United States Bankruptcy Court for the District of 24 Delaware. So you've still got the problem that we addressed 25 in our initial pleadings, which is that borrowers are running

1 to court in Oregon, North Carolina, Ohio, Illinois trying to 2 prevent foreclosures and they also have to sue here. That's 3 hard. Now, Your Honor, that is not, as I emphasized, just a 4 matter of protecting borrowers' rights because they are 5 trying in these contexts to get money out of the estate.
6 They're trying to get non-monetary relief from the estate or 7 from the trust in the form, potentially of recession of the 8 loans. So it matters to them and it's an interest just like 9 any other interest in estate property in the functioning of 10 these companies. There's another problem, Your Honor, with 11 how the debtors' interest in getting their distributions are 12 handled. If you notice, Your Honor, the plan provides for 13 interim distributions and then a final distribution and the 14 Trustee is supposed to reserve for that. The financial 15 institutions will, presumably, get interim distributions. A 16 claimant only gets an interim distribution if it's been 17 allowed. The borrower claims won't be. The financial 18 institution claims, at least the early payment defaults and 19 so on, will be presumably processed efficiently. That's 20 unfair right there. In addition, the Trustee is the person 21 who decides, the plan Trustee is the person who decides 22 whether the reserve is sufficient. It's got to be, quote, 23 "reasonable" under the plan, but there's no requirement of 24 any kind of finding that the reserve is reasonable. There's 25 no provision anywhere that establishes a process by which

1 that reserving has to occur, and nobody knows whether any 2 reserving will be done at all for borrower claims or if so 3 how much it will be. The net result is that the estate may 4 be substantially out of money before borrower claims are even 5 liquidated, and all of this will be decided by the biased 6 Trustee operating under the supervision of the POC. The 7 problems that I mentioned are also evidenced in the 8 disclosure statement, Your Honor, and we listed a litany, 9 most of those actually were addressed by other creditors as 10 well. I want to focus on the ones that uniquely apply to 11 borrowers. First, How will their claims be handled? The 12 disclosure statement doesn't clarify the plan in any way. No 13 borrower could look at that disclosure statement and have any 14 comprehension of how his or her claims would be handled under 15 the plan. Second, Where are the loans? No borrower is 16 currently finding out where the loans are, and that affects 17 how their claims with respect to the loans are treated, 18 because as I explained, the injunctions apply differently to 19 loans depending on whether they are loans currently held by 20 debtors or loans that have already been sold by debtors. You 21 can't find out even if you want to. The issue of the claim 22 form still hasn't been disclosed, to my knowledge, unless it 23 was disclosed very recently, and there's nothing in the 24 disclosure statement that explains how defenses to financial 25 institution claims will be handled, which are critically

1 important to borrowers as well as the financial institutions.
2 I may be mistaken, but I haven't seen a liquidation analysis 3 of any kind let alone one that would differentiate among how 4 borrowers' claims are going to be handled versus other 5 claims, and that's a real difference given the different 6 mechanisms for resolving these claims. The Trustee isn't 7 identified, which is important to borrowers, and the effect
8 of intercompany claims on borrower interest is not explained 9 - the effect of the resolution is not explained. So those 10 are among the most important ways why borrowers' interests in 11 the estate are not being adequately protected now. And I'd 12 like to turn to why the Committee and the debtor are not in a 13 position to make it better. Now, you wouldn't necessarily 14 expect a debtor to completely look out for borrower claims in 15 these interests because after all the borrowers are suing or 16 are filing claims against the debtor, but a Committee, you 17 might in some cases, but this case is a lot like cases 18 involving asbestos, breast implants, medical malpractice 19 claims against hospitals, all of these are types of 20 situations where multiple unsecured creditors have the same 21 priority but they have very different interests in how estate 22 assets are going to be handled and distributed. And that's 23 why you so commonly see special committees appointed to 24 represent asbestos claimants, breast implant recipients, 25 physicians who performed the breast implant procedures in Dow

1 Corning, or in many hospital bankruptcy cases, malpractice
2 claimants. Their view of how the assets should be handled 3 are fundamentally different, and you can see that, that 4 difference in perspective has permeated in this case. We 5 quoted a couple of the remarks of Committee counsel about how 6 borrower claims are just efforts to get out of their 7 financial obligations, which I don't think is a fair way to 8 describe these claims at all. I mentioned that the law firms
9 representing the Committee while excellent firms, I have no 10 quarrel with their abilities, their morality, their ethics, 11 anything else, but they aren't bank firms. There's no way
12 that a firm - Hahn & Hessen is one of the most prominent bank 13 firms in New York. I mean I've just put on a program for the 14 New York City Bar Association where I invited somebody from 15 that firm to talk about the bank perspective. They're well 16 known in that area. They're not going to look out for 17 consumer interests. And you can see this then on how 18 particular disputes are going to be coming up in this case 19 and how the perspectives will be radically different. Were 20 the mortgage terms legal? Were the interest rates too high?
21 Should the mortgages be rescinded? Are any other entities
22 palpable for fraud or other misconduct by the debtors? All 23 these issues are bound to come up if this case is handled 24 properly and have to be addressed with borrower input, 25 sophisticated, well-represented borrower input. And that

1 applies, of course, to equitable subordination and other 2 types of claims, and you can see what a difference it can 3 make just by looking at the First Alliance case where a 4 Borrowers Committee was appointed and there was a successful 5 prosecution of an aiding and abetting case against a major 6 creditor of the debtor in that case, Lehman Brothers. Your 7 Honor, I think it's also important to address head-on this 8 issue of, Are these claims just personal claims by a few 9 individuals or is this really a major constituency? At a 10 minimum we have 450, that's what the debtors report, 450
11 claims. There may be thousands more. They are generally not 12 represented in these cases at all. In their claims in their 13 state courts, they're represented usually by Legal Aid 14 lawyers or small firm lawyers. These are not people 15 represented by large malpractice or asbestos tort claimants 16 firms. They can't do it on their own. Paula Rush has done a 17 fine job especially advocating for the insertion of 363(o)
18 language, but on these issues that I've just been talking 19 about, pro se litigants can't do it, and I, therefore, 20 disagree with the suggestion in the Committee's papers and in 21 the debtors' papers that there has been gamesmanship or 22 somebody waited until an opportune moment to file this 23 motion. Well, that's not what happened at all. I think the 24 Court should know how this all came about. It's really quite 25 remarkable that these borrowers are here at all. It's not

1 that somebody waited or conspired to interfere with the 2 process. In most cases, the Court knows, no borrowers came 3 forward and asked for a Committee. It's really almost 4 happenstance. I and my colleagues at Gilbert & Randolph
5 represent a number of housing organizations. Zuckerman
6 Spaeder represents a number of attorneys general and housing 7 organization on pro bono matters, and in the course of casual 8 conversations we realized that there was this issue out here, 9 and over the last few months, we mentioned it to them and 10 eventually borrowers came to us. They got signed up. They 11 came to us in August and engaged us in August and September 12 to do this. They're represented by Legal Aid lawyers, many 13 of whom have no experience at all in Chapter 11 cases.
14 That's why this happened, and it almost didn't happen. You 15 had to get law firms willing to do this pro bono. You had to 16 get law firms who knew how to handle - knew something about 17 Chapter 11, and you had to get the individual borrowers from 18 around the country to sign up if they were interested, and as 19 you saw, a dozen did sign up. There have actually been 450
20 claims files, but that's not a conspiracy to derail the case 21 or persecute these institutions or this debtor. That's just 22 how it came about. It should be a surprise that it happened 23 at all. It shouldn't be something that is held against 24 unsophisticated borrowers. Your Honor, since there's so much 25 else to be done in this case, we're not saying that Your

1 Honor has to agree with all our plan objections and finds 2 that they are valid now or that that Your Honor has to find 3 that particular subjects have to be addressed in the 4 disclosure statement or that Your Honor has to find that 5 there should be equitable subordination claims. We're merely 6 saying that these are real issues. They affect the 7 borrowers' interest in the estate as well as the borrowers' 8 other interests, but they really do affect the borrowers' 9 interest in the estate and that affects where they live, 10 whether they can stay in their homes, et cetera. With so 11 much left to be done here, we respectfully ask Your Honor to 12 appoint a committee and my colleague, Mr. McCauley is now 13 going to address the discretionary factors, Your Honor.

14 THE COURT: Thank you. Just a moment, Mr. McCauley.

15 (Whereupon at 9:47 a.m., a recess was taken in the 16 hearing in this matter.)

17 (Whereupon at 10:12 a.m., the hearing in this 18 matter reconvened and the following proceedings were had:)

19 THE COURT: Thank you for allowing me to take a 20 break.

21 MR. McCAULEY: Absolutely, Your Honor. For the 22 record, Thomas McCauley. Your Honor, the second part of the 23 analyses, the burden of proof shifts to the parties opposing 24 the motion to demonstrate that the Court should not exercise 25 its discretion to appoint a committee. In our motion, we

1 cited the Dow Corning case. It's actually the Becker
2 Industries case out of the Southern District at page 949
3 where the Court says, quote, "The burden shifts to the 4 opponent of the motion to show that the cost of the 5 additional committee sought significantly outweighs the 6 concern for adequate representation and can't be alleviated 7 in other ways." That's at page 949.

8 THE COURT: Uh-huh.

9 MR. McCAULEY: The discretionary factors that the 10 parties have put forth effectively I would consider as, one, 11 being the size and complexity of the case; two, being the 12 cost of an additional committee; three, being the added 13 complexity from another committee; forth being the timing of 14 the motion; and fifth the other avenues or the lesser 15 remedies that could be undertaken aside from appointing a 16 committee. The Dow Corning decision, however, does 17 emphasize that the discretionary factors are merely 18 considerations and should not prevent the appointment of an 19 additional committee if the appointment is justified on the 20 facts. Now, no one disputes here the first factor, the size 21 and complexity of these cases. So, that favors the 22 appointment of an additional committee. The second point is 23 the added cost, and certainly there would be some extra cost, 24 Your Honor, but the question is whether the cost that would 25 be added would significantly outweigh the concern for

1 adequate representation. We don't think that's the case
2 here. To date the estate professionals have racked up
3 significant fees in this case. Debtors' counsel through 4 August has submitted fees in excess of 12.6 million.
5 According to the July monthly operating report for American 6 Home Mortgage Corp., which I understand is the primary debtor
7 in this case, they've paid out 37.7 million in professionals 8 fees in this case. So, also you have to look at where we are 9 in this case. We're not at the beginning of the case. We're 10 at the end of the case or in the plan stage. So, given that 11 first of all we've got a Borrowers Committee with a 12 relatively narrow focus, we're not looking to - the Committee 13 is not looking to touch on all issues in the case, the 14 Creditors Committee is for that purpose. The Borrowers 15 Committee would be simply to focus on issues relative to the 16 borrowers. Secondly, like I said, where this case is, the 17 assets have mostly been liquidated. There's a plan on the 18 table. It's just a question of addressing the notice and 19 other problems that we've raised in our papers and getting 20 this case to the finish line. In our reply papers, we've -

21 THE COURT: Your issues with the plan, at least as 22 articulated, are fundamental; aren't they?

23 MR. McCAULEY: They are fundamental, but, Your 24 Honor, this is a liquidating case; okay? I mean, it's not 25 rocket science, I mean -

1 THE COURT: Well, my point is simply you're saying
2 it's not expensive. You seem to imply it's not expensive 3 because all you want to do is tweak the plan, but you want to 4 go beyond tweaking the plan.

5 MR. McCAULEY: I'm not saying we're going to be 6 tweaking the plan, but in consideration of what has gone on 7 so far in this case versus what needs to be done to the plan,
8 I don't view that as being a - we're not doubling the length 9 of this case by any means. And in our papers we noted some 10 suggestions that we had, you know, how a counsel for a 11 Borrowers Committee could get to speed quickly without having 12 to sort of incur a lot of costs. I mean, I will say that, in 13 having to jump in, in this case at this point, we had to get 14 up to speed somewhat already. Also, the debtors talk about 15 the fact that there's a projected small distribution under 16 the plan. Well, that doesn't equate to the idea that there's 17 a small pool of assets available for general unsecured 18 creditors. I mean, there's a projected distribution of 19 pennies on the dollar but the reason for that is, the total 20 universe of general unsecured claims is in terms of billions 21 of dollars. I mean, the projection is that there will be a 22 fairly substantial amount of assets available for general 23 unsecured creditors, and a small amount of added costs to 24 represent borrowers is not going to appreciably diminish that 25 projected return. It's a little bit of math, but I -

1 THE COURT: I've got it.

2 MR. McCAULEY: Okay. The third factor is the added
3 complexity in the case. A Borrowers Committee doesn't add 4 complexity that is not already present in this case, and we 5 think a Borrowers Committee would add value in a number of 6 ways. First, the Committee can institute litigation that 7 will bring value to the estates. First Alliance is a great 8 illustration of that. Second, the Borrowers Committee can 9 speak with one voice for borrowers. I think that's in terms 10 of judicial efficiency, if nothing else, because instead of 11 having different parties raise complaints either before or 12 after confirmation, you have one voice speaking for 13 borrowers. One voice can sit at the table with the debtors 14 and the Committee to address the plan issue. There's an 15 efficiency that's a Committee would be able to bring to bear.
16 Third, in addressing plan negotiations and the structural 17 deficiencies with noticing the plan, whether or not you grant 18 this motion today isn't going to affect those problems.
19 They're still there, and we think that appointing a committee 20 allows borrowers to be properly represented so the issues can 21 be addressed between the parties and if necessary put before 22 the Court so everyone can address them in an informed manner.
23 I mean, we have no interest in prolonging the process and if 24 you look at borrowers, I mean, they're facing foreclosure.
25 They want immediate relief. They don't want anything to drag

1 out either.

2 THE COURT: Well, is there anything a Borrowers
3 Committee could reasonably do in the short term to prevent 4 foreclosures?

5 MR. McCAULEY: You mean individual foreclosures?

6 THE COURT: Right.

7 MR. McCAULEY: You know it sort of depends on the 8 particular situation given whether - I mean, I know in this 9 case there have been a number of lenders who have loans that 10 were sold by the debtors to other folks coming in seeking to 11 lift the stay. There's that issue, but there's also issues 12 of where the debtors actually still own the loans and BofA is 13 servicing them or something else. So, I know I'm not 14 answering your question, but I don't necessarily have an 15 answer because it sort of depends on - I mean, obviously, a 16 Borrowers Committee is not going to address specific borrower
17 issues, just like a Creditors Committee doesn't address
18 specific claims, but if there are general borrower interests 19 that can be addressed by a committee that can facilitate 20 whether it's general issues affecting borrowers and those who 21 are potentially facing foreclosure, then that's something 22 that a Borrowers Committee could do.

23 THE COURT: All right.

24 MR. McCAULEY: Your Honor, the fourth issue which 25 obviously folks have made and specifically the debtors and

1 the Committee have emphasized is the timing of the motion 2 here. The concerns that they raise and the cases that they 3 cite just don't apply here. The Committee talks about that 4 the motion was filed solely to frustrate confirmation. Well, 5 that's not the case. The Committee's filed it to protect 6 borrower interests and to prevent the plan from frustrating 7 their interests. Now, they cited a couple of cases, the 8 Cathar (phonetical) case, the Interco case. Those are 9 distinguishable, those were reorganization cases. In those 10 cases the interests were seeking the appointment of an 11 additional committee to adequately represent themselves. As 12 the U.S. Trustee has realistically set forth in its 13 statement, that's not the case here. This timing issue, 14 also, is colored by two concerns that no one has really given 15 an answer for. One, is the lack of notice. There was no 16 actual notice given to all borrowers in this case. The 17 second concern is, what's the prejudice from filing the 18 motion at this time? I mean, the cases talk about delay, but 19 delay in a legal concept really means prejudice, and no one 20 has articulated a material prejudice here that should cause 21 the Court to not grant this motion. Now, the debtors talk 22 about that they gave notice, they gave notice to actual 23 borrowers who had actual or pending threatened litigation at 24 the time or prior to the time that they served the bar date
25 notice. They argue that all the other borrowers are unknown

1 creditors. Well, under the case law that's not what the 2 courts look to. I mean, debtors - it's undisputed that the 3 debtors had all the addresses and what they're saying is 4 that, Well, we didn't know that these other borrowers might 5 have claims. Well, the fact that they knew where they could 6 find these creditors is what the cases look to. It's not 7 whether the knew whether or not they had claims. Now, on top 8 of that they should have known that there were other borrower 9 claims out there. There's a number of borrowers who have 10 appeared in this courtroom. There are borrowers who have 11 asserted claims in lawsuits against the debtors during this 12 case and outside the case. The debtors pushed unconventional 13 mortgage products on unsophisticated borrowers. They've got 14 to expect that they're going to get some claims whether 15 they're claims based on the teaser rate interest or on the 16 payment arm options, they should have known, and the fact 17 that they published notice in the New York Times that's not 18 exactly going to provide constructive notice to consumers in 19 New York let alone all over the country, maybe in the New 20 York Post. Now, I think the lack of notice affects the 21 timing issue, but as well, it also affects how the debtors
22 are not protecting the borrowers' interest in estate 23 property. Now, the second point, as I said, was the lack of 24 prejudice. I've emphasized this is a liquidating case and if 25 a claim is not addressed by the plan, that borrower has no

1 remedy. So, in contrast to the incrementally increasing 2 costs, there's no reason to exclude a constituency in this 3 case, and if you weigh the balance of hardships it's not even 4 close in this case. Finally, we don't think that there's any 5 lesser remedy that exists in this case. Substantial 6 contribution is not an option and an informal Borrowers 7 Committee is not an option, and neither is adding one or two 8 borrowers to the existing Committee. So for these reasons we 9 think the discretionary factors actually support the 10 appointment of a Borrowers Committee. They certainly don't 11 outweigh the lack of adequate representation in this case, 12 and for these reasons we ask that the Court direct the U.S.
13 Trustee to appoint a Borrowers Committee in this case.

14 THE COURT: Thank you, Mr. McCauley. Is there 15 anyone else who wishes to be heard in favor of the motion, 16 either in person or on the telephone? All right, thank you.
17 Mr. Brady.

18 MR. BRADY: Good morning again, Your Honor. Robert 19 Brady for the record on behalf of the debtors. Let me begin 20 with the legal standard and the burden here. I think it's 21 well settled, everyone agrees, that § 1102(a)(2) places the 22 question of the appointment of an additional committee within 23 the sound discretion of this Court and the case law is clear.
24 Appointment of an additional committee is an extraordinary 25 remedy that courts are reluctant to grant. We cite to that

1 proposition in the Garden Ridge case, which cites Sharon 2 Steel. Now, as a practical matter, Your Honor, I think it is 3 fair to say that there is a presumption in this jurisdiction
4 for the appointment of only one committee, and a party 5 seeking the appointment of additional committees bears a very 6 heavy burden.

7 THE COURT: Well, yes and no, and you can certainly 8 have an argument to distinguish this from the asbestos cases, 9 which are in many ways quite different, but it's routine to 10 appoint an asbestos claimants individual and often sometimes 11 a property damage committee in those types of cases.

12 MR. BRADY: And there is a key distinction there, 13 Your Honor. In the Dow Corning case, the asbestos cases, in 14 those cases -

15 THE COURT: They're mass tort cases.

16 MR. BRADY: - the product the debtor manufactured, 17 there's really no dispute as to liability. The question went 18 to damages. So, the parties assumed if there was damage, 19 there was liability. Here there is no per se agreement that 20 the product that the debtor sold was defective. The question 21 is, were borrowers mislead or fraudulent induced to enter 22 into mortgages they couldn't afford or didn't understand.
23 And that is a case-by-case factual inquiry.

24 THE COURT: Well, that I understand and certainly 25 that's probably the legal answer, but is that the practical

1 answer given the extra judicial non-evidence in front of the 2 Court about what's going on in the real world in this country
3 and in this economy, Countrywide, what was the settlement, 4 9.8 billion earlier this week. Certainly the political 5 environment is less than positive, and I understand these 6 weren't subprime loans, these were all-day loans but should 7 the Court consider not necessarily the legal intricacies but 8 perhaps the more practical intricacies involved?

9 MR. BRADY: Your Honor, there was no evidence to 10 that. I mean, one point I want to make clear at the 11 beginning is, the borrowers have put on no evidence, and the 12 statements of counsel are really just that, and we've heard a 13 number of things, there may be thousands of claimants or 14 borrowers who are claimants, that the debtors systematically 15 engaged in fraud and illegal conduct, speculation that word 16 of the bankruptcy may have reached Wall Street but not Main 17 Street. There's just no evidence before the Court, there's 18 no record before the Court. There is the press, Your Honor, 19 and reports in the press that right now mortgage companies 20 are under fire. There's the subprime debacle that has led to 21 - some speculate the current financial problems and economic 22 problems, but there's no evidence in the record today that 23 the debtors engaged in this systematic fraud and illegal 24 conduct. Whether this a case-by-case, an isolated incident, 25 or whether this was system wide in the debtors, and there's 1 been no evidence today. There's been no judgment by a court.

2 There has been no fact presented to lead the Court to believe 3 that this isn't a case-by-case, individual-by-individual -

4 THE COURT: Well, isn't a reply to that, taking the 5 last point first, there's been no judgment because the 6 automatic stay has been in place, and you've had very limited 7 relief from the automatic stay in some isolated cases. Ms.
8 Rush may be one of maybe four or five stay relief motions 9 that have been entered to assert these types of claims as 10 opposed to foreclosure stay relief, and second, doesn't that 11 go to the adequacy of the ability for these people to 12 represent themselves. In other words, isn't a committee 13 necessary for the borrowers to be educated and represented in 14 connection with prosecuting or asserting these potential 15 rights and claims?

16 MR. BRADY: I don't think so, Your Honor, and I'll 17 give you two examples where alleged creditors of the estate 18 operate in a bankruptcy system without an official committee.
19 The first is the securities claimants. Securities class 20 actions are brought all the time. Counsel is retained to 21 represent a class, and they participate in the bankruptcy, 22 Mr. Etkin's here today to comment on the disclosure statement 23 and the plan and to make sure that the plan in no way impacts 24 their ability to pursue -

25 THE COURT: All right, but there's a distinction

1 there. First of all, there's a class. Second of all,
2 there's a sophisticated attorney representing that class's
3 interest. Here there is no class and there is no lawyer.

4 MR. BRADY: Exactly, Your Honor. The borrowers want 5 all the benefits of a class without having established for 6 the Court that there is a class, that this is system wide, 7 that all borrowers suffered fraud or the majority of 8 borrowers suffered from fraud and misleading conduct. They 9 want all the benefits of the class action without having 10 satisfied the ability to certify a class, and the borrowers
11 do have sophisticated counsel today. 'I was very interested 12 to hear how it came about from counsel's perspective and 13 perhaps if we had evidence, we might have learned more when 14 the borrowers first consulted with bankruptcy counsel, but I 15 think by their own admission it was August even though this 16 motion wasn't filed until -

17 THE COURT: Well, one of the implications or the 18 representations to the Court is that this was a lawyer idea 19 and not necessarily a client idea.

20 MR. BRADY: I agree, Your Honor, that was clearly 21 the implication I took, and again, it sounds very much like 22 the class action securities situation. The other example is 23 the Warren Act, Your Honor. Employees who are terminated 24 with little or no notice, obtain counsel as a group, and 25 counsel for those Warren Act claimants participate in these

1 bankruptcies. They have an adversary in this bankruptcy.
2 That counsel has no assurance of payment. That counsel has 3 no estate funded payment. That counsel is pursuing the 4 claims of a group of creditors, taking the risk that the 5 counsel will get paid, and they are pursuing their individual 6 claims against this estate based on alleged Warren Act 7 violations. So those are two examples where groups of 8 creditors who may not have independent financial resources to 9 protect themselves are able to operate within the system 10 without the appointment of an official committee. We think 11 that the borrowers really want the benefits of guaranteed 12 payment from the estate, paid by the other creditors of the 13 estate, and the advantages of in effect a class action being 14 certified without having established that there is a class.

15 THE COURT: Well, let's go back to a case you had 16 R&I where we had a Creditors Committee and an Equity
17 Committee. Now, there was no - I think there was, actually, 18 a securities class in that case, but I may be mistaken. In 19 either, it didn't really matter because the Equity Committee 20 was formed partly because (a) equity was in all likelihood 21 going to be in the money and (b) because they had disparate 22 claims that needed to be represented, and that case really 23 came down to the Creditors Committee and the Equity Committee 24 arm wrestling for four or five months to finally reach a 25 result where they could figure out how to deal with the

1 different payments to the different entities, and that was 2 well within the Court's discretion. Now, I think it was 3 Judge Walsh that appointed that committee. I wasn't onboard 4 at that point, and I don't know if the debtor opposed it or 5 not, frankly, I don't.

6 MR. BRADY: Your Honor, I was somewhat involved -

7 THE COURT: That was Mr. Nestor, yeah, right.

8 MR. BRADY: - but not involved, but I think Your 9 Honor identified the key distinction. Equity was in the 10 money and these were two groups, the Creditors Committee and 11 Equity that had -

12 THE COURT: Disparate.

13 MR. BRADY: - disparate positions. Here if the 14 borrowers are able to establish claims against this estate, 15 they would be general unsecured claims. I don't think 16 there's any dispute about that. Not entitled to priority, 17 not administrative, they would be general unsecured claims.
18 They have not been able to establish, either by evidence 19 because there is none, or by argument that their general 20 unsecured claims are any different than the general unsecured 21 claims of other creditors in the case.

22 THE COURT: Now, but they are treated differently.
23 Perhaps not in distribution, but in procedure in the plan.

24 MR. BRADY: Your Honor, again, there is a procedure 25 for EPD breach claims, and that procedure is based really on

1 the historical records of the debtors of when typically the 2 percentages of loans that were sent in portfolios would 3 either be subject to such claims or, you know, either EPD
4 claims or breach claims. Again, here, there is no concession
5 on liability. Your Honor may recall that Katisha Cawthorn
6 (phonetical) stay relief motion where the debtors' testimony 7 was they had very little involvement in the origination in 8 that loan. Basically they funded. A third party broker met 9 with Ms. Cawthorn, sold the product to her. A third party 10 settlement agent conducted the settlement, and when the 11 debtors received verification from those two parties that all 12 the documents were in order, it funded the loan. Now, Ms.
13 Cawthorn contends that she was misled in connection with that 14 loan. It's the debtors' position that they had virtually no 15 involvement other than funding the loan.

16 THE COURT: But she also raised allegations
17 basically, negligent supervision of your agent.

18 MR. BRADY: Absolutely, Your Honor, and those on a 19 case-by-case basis are very factually specific. There has 20 been no evidence that there was widespread fraud or illegal 21 activity at American Home Mortgage in the origination of 22 mortgages, that AHM sent brokers out to mislead the public.
23 It's the implication of the borrower motion, but there's no 24 evidence.

25 THE COURT: Understood.

1 MR. BRADY: So, Your Honor, as indicated by counsel, 2 the first step is to determine whether the borrowers are 3 adequately represented by the existing statutory committee.
4 And again, assuming that a borrower can establish it has a 5 claim against these estates, that bar would be an unsecured
6 creditor and we submit aptly represented by the Official 7 Committee. There's no allegation that this Committee is not 8 operating or functioning properly. There's no evidence that 9 they're not adequately protecting the interests of all 10 unsecured creditors. Every subgroup of creditors, Your 11 Honor, would much prefer to have its own official committee 12 funded by the other creditors, argue for their own specific 13 issues, but that is not how the system works. The Official 14 Committee acts as a fiduciary generally for all unsecured
15 creditors, not the Committee members. There's been much made 16 about the makeup of this Committee yet there's no allegation 17 that the Committee has in any way preferred the rights and 18 issues of just their members.

19 THE COURT: Well, isn't that - I mean, the statute
20 says - maybe I'm not right, but generally speaking, isn't - 21 Yeah, here we go (b)(1), 1103(b)(1), "Committee of creditors 22 appointed under subsection (a) of this section shall 23 ordinarily consist of the persons willing to serve that hold 24 the largest claims - the set of largest claims." Is it not 25 surprising and perhaps - first of all, it's not surprising

1 that there are no borrowers on the Committee. Second, is 2 this perhaps a structural problem in these kind of cases with 3 how the statute is set up, which is perhaps why you see again
4 in the asbestos and mastoid cases a distinction and a 5 formation of official committees for those people or persons 6 in those kind of cases.

7 MR. BRADY: Well, I think it's fair to say, Your 8 Honor, the discretion for the appointment of the committees 9 first lies with the U.S. Trustee's Office, and I think our 10 Trustee's Office has a track record of looking beyond just 11 the largest creditors and often attempting to include 12 creditors from different groups. For instance -

13 THE COURT: I agree.

14 MR. BRADY: - landlords who may at the time of 15 formation not have a claim but may be subject to future
16 rejection are often given a seat on the Committee. Again, a 17 very different position a landlord might have from other 18 creditors. Other creditors may want to liquidate the estate 19 and get the most money. A landlord may want to keep the 20 estate alive and keep a tenant. That may be more important 21 to them. Those are inter-creditor issues that exist in every 22 case. The fact that the borrowers may want something 23 slightly different than the other unsecured creditors does 24 not create the situation where you have to appoint a separate 25 committee.

1 THE COURT: Well, but again, I mean, generally 2 speaking you have a case with a large bond claim out there, 3 $600 million of bonds, $200 million of trade, maybe some 4 landlords, and in my experience, back when I used to actually 5 be actively involved in forming these committees or trying to 6 get these committees formed and trying to represent the 7 committee, you would often see, for instances, three 8 bondholders, an indenture trustee, and three trade creditors, 9 and the indenture trustee would be neutral on all votes that 10 mattered, and the bonds and the creditors would hammer out a 11 solution which was often difficult, the trade and the bonds, 12 and really what moved the case along, but here there's nobody 13 on this Committee to represent the borrowers. There's nobody 14 to hammer this out on the Creditors Committee, and again, I'm 15 not being critical of counsel but isn't there a fundamental 16 difference in how this could - what issues were brought 17 before the Committee for the Committee to hammer out and deal 18 with in taking their positions?

19 MR. BRADY: Well, again, Your Honor, there's no -

20 THE COURT: Your response may be that the borrowers' 21 claims are not material - or maybe not.

22 MR. BRADY: Well, there's no evidence that they are.
23 In other words, the borrowers have not come forward and given 24 the Court some idea of how much the claims may be in relation 25 to the billions of dollars of claims. So, to that extent,

1 you're right, Your Honor, there is no evidence before the 2 Court that the borrowers as a group would represent a 3 statistically large group of creditors to warrant their own 4 committee, but the borrowers chose not to put on any evidence 5 on that point, but there's also no evidence that the 6 borrowers have taken their issues to the Committee and were 7 rejected or rebuffed by the Committee. There's no evidence 8 that the borrowers have attempted to get the Committee to 9 press issues for them, and the Committee has refused. That's 10 simply not in the record.

11 THE COURT: Well, let me ask you, I mean, how many - 12 Who's in charge at your firm of taking calls from borrowers?
13 Who is the poor person that's been dealing with that?

14 MR. BRADY: It's been several different attorneys, 15 Your Honor, based on either the hotline that was set up or 16 calls that come in after pleadings are filed, but -

17 THE COURT: And how many calls have you taken?
18 Hundreds? Thousands?

19 MR. BRADY: I think our papers say over 2,000 calls 20 have been addressed.

21 THE COURT: And isn't that significant?

22 MR. BRADY: Well, I'm not saying all those calls are 23 from borrowers. I mean, we receive calls from all 24 constituencies in the case. Shareholders asking about their 25 stock. Borrowers asking about their mortgages, and not all

1 of the borrower calls we receive assert they have a claim.
2 They want to understand who's servicing their mortgage? Is 3 there going to be any interruption in service? How do they 4 get a payoff on their mortgage amounts so they can refinance?
5 The calls run the spectrum.

6 THE COURT: And the letter that was on the website I 7 assume was a servicing oriented letter.

8 MR. BRADY: Absolutely, Your Honor. In fact the 9 second sentence which counsel did not put into the record
10 specifically addresses that the servicing of their mortgage 11 should be uninterrupted based on the filing. It was an 12 effort.

14 MR. BRADY: Yes.

15 THE COURT: And again, there's no evidence that 16 there has been any effect on servicing.

17 MR. BRADY: Correct, Your Honor, in fact the 18 evidence throughout the case was to the contrary, but 19 servicing operated without a blip during the bankruptcy. The 20 loans were being serviced in accordance with the guidelines, 21 and there have been a few complaints, but again, we had 1.5 22 million loan files either originated by or serviced by the 23 debtors. I would think that out of 1.5 million loan files
24 the fact that there are 450 claims that appear to be borrower 25 related claims, and again, they run the spectrum, they're not

1 all asserting fraud or illegal activity, is a pretty good 2 track record based on the debtors' performance I would think 3 pre-petition, out of 1.5 million if only 450 filed.

4 THE COURT: I do seem to remember we had some blips
5 in August and September on servicing, but I haven't heard 6 anything since, and I mean '07.

7 MR. BRADY: I believe that's right, Your Honor, 8 there were some blips in frozen accounts where certain tax 9 payments didn't get made out of escrows, and we did correct 10 that as quickly as possible of course. Since we're on it, 11 Your Honor, I would like to take a moment to address the 12 noticing of the borrowers because the implication clearly 13 from the borrowers is that was some conscious effort on the 14 part of the debtors or the Committee to disenfranchise 15 borrowers by not serving the 1.5 million borrowers under the 16 loan files in the debtors' system. Movants acknowledge, as 17 they must, that not all borrowers are claimants. Not all 18 borrowers believe they are creditors of this estate. Again, 19 we had 1.5 million loan files and I think the record is clear 20 from prior hearings the cost to serve them with a bar date 21 notice was in excess of $2 million. But the real issue is, 22 Your Honor, the debtors had no reason to believe all of their 23 borrowers would assert claims against the estate. As set 24 forth in our papers, the debtors consulted with their in-25 house legal counsel and if someone had filed a claim, if

1 someone had threatened a claim, if someone had threatened
2 litigation, they received notice. Those were known 3 creditors, potential creditors to the estate. But just 4 because a borrower's address is known to the debtors or 5 reasonably ascertainable, does not make them known for 6 purposes of requiring that they receive notice. The case
7 closest that we found on point is a case called Heavil vs.
8 NBR (phonetical). It's a 1997 case out of the Northern 9 District of Illinois. In that case, Your Honor, NBR had 10 filed for bankruptcy and emerged as a reorganized entity.
11 Subsequent to their reorganization a group of borrowers
12 brought a class action based on alleged unlawful escrow 13 activity. NBR sought to dismiss that class action saying 14 that those claims arose prior to the filing of their 15 bankruptcy and therefore had been discharged. The plaintiffs 16 argued they never received notice of the bankruptcy and 17 therefore those claims were not discharged. The District 18 Court found that the fact that the identities of the 19 homeowners mortgagors may have been reasonably ascertainable 20 from the loan files was not sufficient to make them known 21 creditors. In that case the Court found that NBR, the 22 debtor, could not have anticipated that the mortgagors would 23 bring a claim and therefore were not known creditors
24 requiring notice. Again, the debtors believe that they did 25 an appropriate job of trying to ascertain from the 1.5

1 million loan files they have, the universe of potential 2 creditors, served them with actual notice and published the 3 notice of the bar date, I believe, in three newspapers, not 4 just the New York Times, but three newspapers. Your Honor, 5 the fact that the borrowers have issues with our plan and 6 disclosure statement is not remarkable. That is how the 7 process works. Creditors come forward and raise issues with 8 a plan and disclosure statement, and those creditors aren't 9 entitled to the extraordinary relief of their own committee.
10 The debtors take very seriously all of the borrowers' 11 concerns that were raised in these pleadings. In effect, the 12 motion and the reply filed by the movants formed the basis of 13 a very comprehensive objection to the disclosure statement
14 and to the plan, and in fact, Ms. Rush did adopt that as her 15 objection to the disclosure statement, and we have made 16 changes, and you'll hear more about them if we get to the 17 disclosure statement to address those just like we made 18 changes to the plan to address the issues raised by a variety 19 of creditor constituencies including the securities class 20 action plaintiffs. Now, I'm happy to walk the Court through 21 how we addressed those but suffice it to say, Your Honor, 22 much of what counsel said is in the plan that he believes 23 impacts borrower claims against third parties or attempts to 24 require borrowers to come to Delaware to litigate all issues, 25 we have addressed. That is not the goal of this plan. The

1 goal of this plan is not to in any way impact the borrowers' 2 rights to assert what they believe are direct claims against 3 third parties.

4 THE COURT: So your point also may be that in effect
5 the point a Borrowers Committee has already been achieved.

6 MR. BRADY: In many respects, Your Honor. They 7 raise really two borrower interests they want to protect.
8 The one was to keep people in their homes, and as Your Honor 9 indicated, what effectively could a Borrowers Committee do to 10 prevent individual foreclosure actions. But as we indicated 11 and the Committee indicated, we sold the servicing business.
12 AHM is no longer servicing loans except for a small subset of 13 construction loans, and we have sold or transferred control
14 of the vast majority of the portfolio. The loans are now 15 owned by third parties and now serviced by a third party. So 16 the ability of a Borrowers Committee to in any way have an 17 impact now on keeping mortgagors in their homes, that has 18 passed. Those actions lie with the servicer and the owners 19 of those loans.

20 THE COURT: And yet - I don't want to get too much 21 into the plan and disclosure statement, but and yet those 22 parties, at least the owners, are recipients or beneficiaries 23 of the injunction under the plan.

24 MR. BRADY: The owners of -

25 THE COURT: The current owners of mortgages the

1 debtors have sold. That was my understanding from counsel's 2 argument.

3 MR. BRADY: Let me confirm that, Your Honor, but I 4 don't believe that's the case.

5 THE COURT: All right. Well, again, I don't want to 6 get too much into the plan, but -

7 MR. BRADY: Again, all of the orders transferring 8 loans in this case have been -

9 THE COURT: 363.

10 MR. BRADY: 363(o), and we have added to the plan 11 and the disclosure statement a post-confirmation 363(o) for 12 protection. In other words, any loans transferred out of the 13 trust -

14 THE COURT: Will have the same protection.

15 MR. BRADY: - will have the same protections as 16 363(o) provides. So, again, we have attempted to address 17 that.

18 THE COURT: Okay.

19 MR. BRADY: Your Honor, I think a key element I want 20 to come back to is really this - the argument comes down to 21 why they need a separate committee because they've 22 acknowledged they're unsecured creditors and we have an 23 Unsecured Creditors Committee, are really inter-creditor
24 disputes. They argue that because borrowers may want to pay 25 less interest and lower fees on their mortgage -

1 THE COURT: Uh-huh.

2 MR. BRADY: - other creditors may want the borrowers
3 to pay contractual fees and contractual interest. Those inter-
4 creditor disputes exist in every case. If one creditor's 5 claim is disallowed in the case, it benefits the other 6 creditors because there are fewer claims to cover the funds 7 available. We see it with preference actions. Certain 8 creditors may have received a payment in the 90 days. They 9 don't want to give that back. The other creditors who didn't 10 receive payments in the 90 days would like those funds to come
11 back and to share in those. Those are not the basis that form 12 a separate committee. That's a dynamic that exists in all 13 Chapter 11 cases. That is why the Creditors Committee must 14 look out and have a fiduciary duty for all creditors and leave 15 the individual creditors to pursue their own goals and 16 interests in the case, and I submit the borrowers have done 17 that. The borrowers have participated in this proceeding.
18 I'll get to timing in a moment, Your Honor, but there's been 19 no answer to the timing question. The borrowers have 20 participated. The borrowers eventually did consult with 21 sophisticated bankruptcy counsel. It sounds like that may 22 have come about by the sophisticated bankruptcy counsel 23 reaching out to the borrowers, but there's been no reason 24 given why that we were 13 months into the case when this was 25 filed, that now we're 14 months into the case and the fact

1 that this was filed has already caused a delay of the 2 disclosure statement hearing. And, Your Honor, time is money.
3 There is a burn rate in this case. There is a liquidity issue 4 in this case and that the estate has assets that will take 5 some time to liquidate and to turn into cash. So there is a 6 very real harm caused to the estate, a very real prejudice 7 caused to the other creditors of the estate, but at this late 8 time in the case, the borrowers have emerged, through counsel, 9 and want to renegotiate the plan. I think Your Honor knew my 10 argument coming up, and that is that the system is working.
11 The borrowers have put forth a very comprehensive objection.
12 The debtors in consultation with the Committee are taking 13 steps to address those where we can. There are things that 14 the borrowers want that we can address, but that's not 15 unusual.

16 THE COURT: Well, let me address, I guess the delay 17 is really a cost issue when it comes right down to it because 18 - a little bit of a liquidity issue, of course, as well - or 19 maybe not a little bit, but a liquidity issue and a cost 20 issue, and on the cost side and also on the liquidity side, I 21 mean, the Court has the discretion to fashion a remedy. So,
22 for example, in Federal Mogul, when Judge -

23 MR. BRADY: Fitzgerald?

24 THE COURT: No, before that. Lyons, Judge Lyons
25 formed the Property Damages Committee, I believe, he limited

1 their fees to 250,000, some amount, and limited their time to 2 do what they wanted to do. Now, I could fashion a remedy
3 where I appointed a committee of borrowers, limited their 4 compensation, and gave them a hard deadline to do what they 5 need to do. I could continue the disclosure - and I'm just - 6 I'm not saying I'm going to do this, I'm exploring the options
7 with you. I could delay the disclosure statement for 45 days, 8 give them $400,000 and say, Do what you can do, and if you
9 want to further delay, you'd better come in here with cause, 10 and that would limit - it wouldn't eliminate, but it would 11 limit the prejudice to the estate.

12 MR. BRADY: Potentially, Your Honor, but it would be 13 significant prejudice, and the prejudice is to the other 14 unsecured creditors. That's additional money out of the 15 estate that would otherwise go to creditors. The burn rate 16 increases for all the professionals. It delays the ability to 17 start making distributions on people's claims, but Your Honor, 18 we should focus on the practical reality, it's not going to be 19 that easy to flip a switch and say, Now we have a Borrowers
20 Committee. Who does the U.S. Trustee notice for a Borrowers
21 Committee? All 1.5 million borrowers? The 450 who filed 22 claims? The movants and those who joined? What's the 23 universe of borrowers that the United States Trustee would 24 canvass? And then the U.S. Trustee must make the decision of 25 what - because they have very different claims, different

1 allegations. Some borrowers believe their servicing wasn't 2 properly performed and that caused them a credit problem.
3 Other borrowers claim there was fraud or illegal activity.
4 The U.S. Trustee now must determine, What's the universe of 5 this borrower group and how do I insure that they're 6 adequately represented by a Borrowers Committee? The fact is, 7 the borrower claims are very different. Counsel tries very 8 hard to make Your Honor believe that the borrowers would speak 9 with one voice and one set of issues and all have a common 10 goal, but I would submit, Your Honor, the borrowers have very 11 different issues. Those who believe the servicing wasn't 12 properly performed, they want their money.

13 THE COURT: Well, that's an issue of difficulty 14 intra-committee that you touched on earlier that most Creditor 15 Committees have, and we touched on earlier. There's often 16 tensions in the committee. So, that's really an argument that 17 it would be difficult to run the committee or maybe difficult 18 to form the committee but not necessarily whether the 19 appointment of a committee would be appropriate because of 20 lack of adequate representation.

21 MR. BRADY: Well, it really goes to delay too.

22 THE COURT: All right.

23 MR. BRADY: I'm simply pointing out to Your Honor -

24 THE COURT: The complexity.

25 MR. BRADY: The complexity and the delay of actually

1 getting a committee appointed and then having them choose
2 professionals. You have to tack that on to what Your Honor 3 was suggesting, providing them 45 days to get up to speed and 4 to deal with their issues. You have to tack on that process
5 of actually forming the committee, which could be substantial 6 if the U.S. Trustee has to go through all of those issues as 7 to how to get notice out, who gets notice, and what's the 8 universe of the borrower.

9 THE COURT: Well, again, the Court could fashion a 10 remedy on notice and approve newspaper or publication notice
11 for formation of the committee in nationally-wide publications
12 like USA Today or - as an example.

13 MR. BRADY: Right.

14 THE COURT: And authorize the U.S. Trustee to form 15 the committee based on written submissions as opposed to 16 holding an actual meeting, which is quite common in other 17 jurisdictions. I think in the Southern District of New York 18 that's how all committees are formed.

19 MR. BRADY: It's true, Your Honor could fashion all 20 of those remedies. Again, there's been no evidence that there 21 is a class, if you will, of borrowers with a common interest 22 and common set of claims, that the borrower claims are 23 individual claims and very fact specific. Once they've 24 established they have those claims, they're unsecured
25 creditors of this estate and should receive a distribution

1 under the plan like any other unsecured creditor, but at this 2 point the borrowers have not done that. They have not 3 established that they have allowed general unsecured claims,
4 and that's where the equitable subordination issue rings 5 hollow, I think, Your Honor. 510(c) speaks in terms of an 6 allowed claimant seeking to subordinate another allowed 7 claimant's claim. No one has allowed claims yet in this 8 because the time to object still exists and the debtors are 9 continuing to conduct their claims administration.

10 THE COURT: Well, once the claim is filed it's deemed 11 allowed.

12 MR. BRADY: It's deemed allowed subject to an 13 objection period, and certainly claims that are subject to 14 litigation that are the subject of state court litigation here 15 where the stay's been lifted and is ongoing are certainly 16 disputed by the debtors, and the debtors could put their 17 objection on file quite quickly to confirm that. It's trying 18 not to add additional costs to the borrowers. In other words, 19 if those borrowers come back with a judgment from the state 20 court and amend their claim to include that judgment, the 21 debtors are not likely to further object to that claim unless 22 they assert a priority that's not appropriate. So that 23 process will play itself out. Counsel makes much of the fact 24 that the plan doesn't address how will borrowers' claims get 25 liquidated? They'll get liquidated like every other general

1 unsecured claim. Either they'll seek relief from stay to 2 liquidate their claim in a court of competent jurisdiction or 3 their claim will be addressed through the bankruptcy process.
4 It will either be objected or not, and it will become an 5 allowed claim if appropriate. But that's the same for all 6 creditors.

7 THE COURT: Right, but isn't their response, that's 8 exactly the kind of thing that calls for a committee because 9 common sense tells us that's not fair or - fair is the wrong
10 word. That's not really giving those claimants due process 11 based on their individual situations, based upon their 12 probable lack of ability in many cases to hire counsel to 13 bring these kind of claims, certainly, the inherent 14 difficulties with any pro se plaintiff in prosecuting claims, 15 and wouldn't a committee be appropriate to deal with whether 16 that is the correct procedure or whether some other procedure 17 for liquidating borrower claims would more appropriately deal 18 with the inherent due process problems with requiring pro se
19 plaintiffs to prosecute stay relief motions and litigation 20 either here or in any other appropriate jurisdiction?

21 MR. BRADY: Well, first, nothing requires that 22 borrowers act pro se. For whatever reason the borrowers, if 23 they're unable to obtain counsel, it's because they're 24 pursuing claims against a bankrupt entity. That often does 25 dissuade counsel from wanting to become involved, but again,

1 Your Honor, since this is an extreme remedy you must consider 2 other options to allow the borrowers to have a voice, and that 3 is, why should the borrowers not just take their movants and 4 create an Ad Hoc Committee. The reason is, they want a
5 guarantee of payment. They want to be guaranteed that counsel
6 will get paid, but the Warren Act claimants, their counsel
7 doesn't have a guarantee of payment. The securities class 8 action lawyers don't have a guarantee of payment, but they're 9 operating within the bankruptcy as a group and without an 10 official committee. Why should the borrowers have a different 11 treatment? Why shouldn't this group form an Ad Hoc Committee, 12 press their issues, and seek a 503(b) -

13 THE COURT: Well, let's be realistic. When we have 14 an Ad Hoc Committee of noteholders in a case, like a second 15 tier or a second tranche secured noteholders that's at least 16 partially out of the money, their counsel's getting paid, I 17 mean, usually by the agent, and the agent's getting paid by 18 the noteholders. So, they don't face the same kind of risk 19 and that's the most common Ad Hoc Committees I see.

20 MR. BRADY: Well I would submit in today's 21 environment, there are a lot of second lien committees the 22 debtor formed on an ad hoc basis where there is no assurance 23 that the second liens will receive a distribution under the 24 plan.

25 THE COURT: Well, what about the lawyers?

1 MR. BRADY: Well, again, the lawyers would be paid by 2 the agent, but the agent would pay them through funds received
3 as a distribution to the noteholders. I don't think the agent 4 has an independent obligation to go out and incur expenses of 5 counsel that it can't recover on.

6 THE COURT: Have you ever not been paid for an Ad Hoc 7 Committee of second lien lenders, or did you have really good 8 retainer letters?

9 MR. BRADY: I'm trying to think, Your Honor. I 10 certainly know that my fees have been cut, but I do believe 11 I've always received at least some payment. But again, Your 12 Honor, the process is working here. The borrowers have 13 participated in this case. The borrowers are here today. If 14 I understood counsel correctly, because I think their paper 15 said they don't represent the movants individually on the 16 disclosure, but I think counsel indicated that his firm was 17 representing Ms. Rush today, and she has fully adopted the 18 borrowers' motion and their reply as her objection to the 19 disclosure statement. So that, we think we've addressed as 20 much as we can. The Committee will be heard on that as well.
21 There's the United States Trustee, and ultimately Your Honor 22 will make the decision whether the disclosure statement is 23 appropriate and whether the plan should be confirmed, and 24 whether it provides appropriate safeguards for the borrower 25 issues, but they're before the Court and they will be heard by

1 Your Honor, and Your Honor will get to ultimately make the 2 decision as to whether the borrower objections and comments
3 should be included in the plan. So the system is working.
4 The question is, are the borrowers entitled to halt the 5 proceedings, form the extraordinary remedy of creating a 6 second official creditors committee of borrowers when there's 7 been no evidence that the existing Committee is not capable of 8 addressing their rights as general unsecured creditors and 9 incur that additional cost, that additional delay to the 10 detriment of all other creditors in the case or should the 11 borrowers proceed like the other creditors have, which is 12 raise issues with the plan and disclosure statement, either 13 attempt to resolve them or have the Court rule and we move 14 forward on confirmation of the plan. Now, Your Honor, I've 15 had a long presentation here. I think I've covered almost 16 everything during our process, and I won't start at the 17 beginning and walk through it all, so - But, if I may, Your 18 Honor, I may let Mr. Indelicato speak and if there's anything 19 I missed out of the presentation I wanted to bring to Your 20 Honor's attention maybe I could have a few moments after he's 21 completed.

22 THE COURT: Sure, we can definitely do that. Let's 23 take a short recess though before Mr. Indelicato's argument.
24 So, we'll try to reconvene at 15 minutes after the hour. All 25 right?

1 (Whereupon at 11:06 a.m., a recess was taken in the 2 hearing in this matter.)

3 (Whereupon at 11:20 a.m., the hearing in this matter 4 reconvened and the following proceedings were had:)

5 THE CLERK: All rise.

6 THE COURT: Please be seated. Mr. Indelicato, good
7 morning.

8 MR. INDELICATO: Good morning, Your Honor. Mark
9 Indelicato from Hahn & Hessen on behalf of the Committee.
10 Your Honor, I will try and make this brief because I think Mr.
11 Brady has addressed many of the issues that the Committee 12 has, but I think let me start first by assuring the Court and 13 the borrowers that the interest of the Unsecured Creditors
14 Committee is nothing more than maximizing creditors, all 15 unsecured creditors, and that includes the mega banks, that 16 includes the borrowers who have unsecured claims against the 17 estates. This Committee was appointed by the U.S. Trustee's 18 Office, and as I've said in other cases, I think they did get 19 it right in here. I do agree there is no borrower on the 20 Committee but there are two indenture trustees. There are 21 three parties involved in the purchase of securitization of 22 the loans, and there were two trade creditors, and now we're 23 down to one trade creditor because their issue was resolved, 24 and I would point out, Your Honor, when people question the 25 integrity of this Committee they should be mindful, this is a

1 Committee that's supporting a plan in which there may likely 2 be no distribution to the two indenture trustees because of 3 inherent subordination provisions. So, if people believe that 4 this Committee is not exercising their fiduciary duties, I 5 want to set that record straight. Your Honor, I think what we 6 need to focus on and my comments from last November have come 7 back to haunt me yet again when we dealt with that relief stay
8 motion that the Committee opposed, and the Committee opposed 9 it for various reasons that we discussed at that hearing and 10 my comments, while I won't necessarily say being taken out of 11 context, indicated that the Committee was not interested in or 12 mindful of the plight of the individual borrowers, and I could 13 not foresee what was to happen over the next eight to ten 14 months, but now, Your Honor, we are representing the 15 liquidating trustee in the New Century case, and we are in 16 essence stepping into the debtors' role trying to deal with 17 the many issues raised by borrowers and in foreclosure 18 actions, and to say we've been somewhat humbled by what is 19 going out there, not only as it's affecting the broader 20 market, by how it's affecting the individuals, we do 21 understand the issues, and we understand the issues to be 22 several-fold. First, Your Honor, to the extent the borrowers 23 have claims against American Home, unfortunately for the 24 borrowers, given the posture of this case where all of the 25 loans have been sold and/or otherwise dealt with particular in

1 the BofA settlement, the debtor is not in a position to either 2 agree or negotiate recessions, modifications, or amendments to 3 those loan documentation, and that is their primary relief
4 their seeking. To the extent they might otherwise be entitled 5 to that relief, Your Honor, they will have claims against this 6 estate and that will be an unsecured claim and it will share 7 pari passu with all other unsecured claims. This plan and 8 nothing in this plan eliminates their rights to assert claims 9 against third parties. If there is an entity that purchased a 10 loan from the debtor and that loan has infirmities, the 11 borrower may have the rights to sue those third parties and/or 12 defend in any foreclosure actions. So, Your Honor, the relief 13 they're seeking, unfortunately, is not available through a 14 committee or any other means in this bankruptcy proceeding. I 15 understand the Court's concern that the borrowers are not 16 being addressed individually as a group as the EPD claimants 17 may be, for example. Your Honor, with respect to the EPD and 18 breached protocol, the borrowers are looking at that as a 19 blessing to the EPD and breached claimants as an easy 20 streamlined process to resolve their claims. I will tell you, 21 and I think you may have noticed in the objections to the 22 disclosure statements, I don't believe the EPD and breach 23 claimants believe it's a blessing at all. They believe we're 24 artificially deflating their claims, limiting their claims, 25 and not giving them their proper due. So, Your Honor, it's

1 the old proverbial, the grass is always greener on the other 2 side. We will deal with the claims of the borrowers in an 3 appropriate manner. Whoever ultimately is appointed as the 4 liquidating trustee will review them on an individual basis, 5 deal with the merits of the claim, and to the extent it's 6 appropriate, will object to the claim and if not the claim 7 will be allowed. But I think the liquidating trustee will 8 have to deal with them on an individual basis. There's no 9 methodology, at least that I've been able to come up with, 10 whether there was a Borrowers Committee in place or not, where 11 you could waive a magic wand and say all of the borrower
12 issues would be dealt with in one way, shape, or form. There 13 are, as Mr. Brady said, potentially 1.5 million borrowers out 14 there and some of them may have claims and some of them may 15 not. The borrowers will be protecting both those who got the 16 benefit of their bargain and those that did not. There's an 17 inherent conflict and the Court pointed out that that could be 18 an intra-committee issue among various creditors, but I think 19 it goes more, Your Honor, to point out that each individual 20 borrower's claims are individual to themselves. Whether they 21 were defrauded or not, whether they had issues with the title 22 company that didn't release a escrow, whether they've never 23 gotten the information they wanted regarding whether their 24 real estate taxes were paid or not, whether the service had 25 failed to pay their real estate taxes and the result of that,

1 there was a tax foreclosure, whether there were issues with 2 respect to the agents or whether there were issues with 3 respect to all of that. Those are going to be individual
4 claims, Your Honor, that each - unfortunately, each borrower 5 is going to have to address itself. I'm not sure even 6 appointing a Borrowers Committee is going to address those 7 issues. Your Honor, there are issues about equitable 8 subordination and whether or not the liquidating trustee would 9 properly investigate those. I can assure this Court, as we've 10 done in other cases, to the extent this Committee has any say 11 in the documents that are being proposed, and we do, that the 12 liquidating trustee and who the liquidating trustee will be, 13 that liquidating trustee will be charged with investigating 14 all claims, and I can assure the Court that I believe he will 15 to the extent he or she will. To the extent there are 16 appropriate claims against financial institutions that will 17 bring benefits to the estate, those will be pursued. If the 18 borrowers believe they have a right to equitably subordinate 19 an individual lender or other party who dealt with the debtor, 20 I'm not even exactly sure in the context of the bankruptcy how 21 it would be dealt with. Really, what they'll be looking for 22 is to get benefits for themselves or their individual 23 mortgages, and in and of itself, it doesn't seem to be a 24 result that is conducive to the bankruptcy process. Your 25 Honor, I don't want to belabor the timing issue, and for

1 whatever reason it was, they did make the motion thirteen 2 months after the case filed, but I think the Court needs to 3 focus on - and as they said, Where we are today. And where we 4 are today, Your Honor, is on the precipice of presenting a 5 disclosure statement to this Court and hopefully getting a 6 plan confirmed. I do not want to minimize the liquidity 7 issues that this debtor is facing. On a conference call of 8 the Committee in order to break what was otherwise a tense 9 call, I made a comment that, Let's see which one of you is 10 left after this call it over. Believe me nobody laughed at 11 the end of the call, but what it points out, Your Honor, is 12 these assets are very volatile, and the quicker we can 13 reorganize and begin the process of getting a liquidating 14 trustee in there, the better off we're going to be. The 15 opportunities to sell the buildings that existed a year ago, 16 don't exist today. The opportunities to sell the mortgages 17 that were a year ago, don't exist today. We have a bank that 18 we thought was golden, and who knows what its value is in 19 today's market. So, Your Honor, it is important that this 20 process start and conclude. Even 45 days could have a 21 significant impact on the ultimate result of the recoveries in 22 this estate. Your Honor, I think I just want to close by 23 again adopting many of the comments made by Mr. Brady, by 24 assuring this Court and the borrowers that this Committee 25 really is truly out there looking at the interests of all

1 creditors whether they be the borrowers or the big investment 2 bankers, and that we are doing everything to maximize the 3 recovery to creditors. Unfortunately, these borrowers have 4 only unsecured claims against the estate which are being 5 represented by my group. To the extent they have other 6 claims, those claims are against third parties, and if their 7 objection did anything and helped clarify in the plan that 8 those claims are not being waived, then sobeit, but I think 9 Your Honor, that is the best they were able to get out of 10 this. They have their rights against third parties, and their 11 rights as unsecured creditors are being protected by this 12 Committee. Thank you.

13 THE COURT: Mr. McMahon?

14 MR. McMAHON: Your Honor, good morning. Joseph 15 McMahon for the United States Trustee. I think we come before 16 the Court today, Your Honor, in a position to what an amicus
17 would do basically. We're not, to be clear, I know you're 18 hearing from two parties who oppose the relief requested. We 19 are not in such a position. I think we are coming before this 20 Court as a friend in a neutral position. We wanted to hear 21 what the borrowers had to say and what the opposing parties
22 had to say here today before speaking. I think our statement 23 in light of the argument that we heard today, I think really 24 cuts to the core of the way we see the issue which is, you 25 have the adequate representation argument, and Your Honor

1 heard the competing arguments on the adequate representation 2 issue, and the competing arguments that the Court heard with 3 respect to that. With respect to the formation of the 4 Committee, Your Honor, Your Honor is well aware of the 5 logistics, meaning that we are given a list, a list of the top 6 twenty or top thirty, normally, that's attached to a petition.
7 Your Honor is correct. I can assure Your Honor that there
8 were no borrowers on that list at the time that we solicited
9 for the formation of an official committee. To the extent 10 that a borrower heard of the bankruptcy case and asked for a 11 questionnaire, we certainly would have sent it, but my 12 recollection is that I don't believe any borrowers stepped 13 forward for consideration for the Committee. But, with 14 respect to that issue, Your Honor, I think that the record, I 15 guess, outlines competing arguments with respect to adequate 16 representation, and I think that that issue can probably be 17 addressed without casting aspersions on the work that the 18 Committee has done to date. We don't - based upon the record, 19 I don't think there's any factual basis for concluding that 20 the official Committee has not been diligently representing 21 the interests of general unsecured creditors as a general
22 matter. But, that being said, Your Honor, I think the point 23 the borrowers are essentially making is that there's this 24 class of plan and disclosure statement related issues that we 25 - Well, first, we're not on the Committee, and second, that

1 are distinct to our interests, our constituency, and we need
2 to be heard on those and absent the official committee 3 vehicle, we're just not going to get there. That's really the 4 point at which I think we're at in this hearing, and a few - a 5 couple of other things, Your Honor. We do agree that there 6 has to be a recognition of, to the extent that the Court were 7 to appoint a committee, what the purpose of it would be. We 8 appreciate the fact that the borrowers have their own distinct 9 individual claims and that obviously the official committee 10 vehicle would not be used as a purpose for, say, prosecuting 11 their own personal property interests or addressing those 12 interests viz-a-viz the estate. I think the critical point 13 that the borrowers are making with respect to the purpose of 14 the committee and the one we think is worthy of this Court's 15 consideration is, the issues relating to the plan and 16 disclosure statement. Your Honor, in colloquy with Mr. Brady, 17 I think, touched on some points that are noteworthy. First, 18 with respect to fashioning a remedy, we absolutely agree that 19 the Court under Federal Mogul a Third Circuit decision has the 20 ability to condition payment of professional fees and the like 21 to the extent that you were to go in that direction. With 22 respect to notice, Your Honor, Mr. Brady raised the issue of, 23 Well, how are we going to get from point A to point B when we 24 have a potential pull of 1.5 million people, and logistically, 25 I'd just like to speak to that point. I know it's a secondary

1 issue and we talk about it later, more, but in every Chapter 2 11 case you get a list of 20 or 30 entities that are 3 presumably the largest claims. We have a case here where 4 regardless of the dispute about notice, the claims bar date
5 has passed. Presumably, it would not be difficult to get a 6 list of asserted homeowner claims from the debtors, the claims
7 agent, whoever, and I guess address notice with respect to a 8 committee in that direction. I could also speak with 9 borrowers' counsel to the extent that, again, we get to that 10 point, but I don't think that, and obviously I would defer to 11 the Court on this, but there's a way of getting or addressing 12 that point short of publication notice in the short term. I 13 don't know if the Court has any questions for me, but I think

15 THE COURT: Well, assuming arguendo, and again, it's 16 an assumption, that the Court were to direct the appointment
17 of a Borrowers Committee, we cut through the notice issues, 18 what kind of time frame do you think you could act under, 19 reasonably.

20 MR. McMAHON: Well, assuming that the Court agreed 21 with our view regarding notice, I get the list within a day or 22 two, I think that we could probably address that issue within 23 10 days, 10 to 14 days would be - 14 days being the outlier.

24 THE COURT: Okay. That's all, thank you.

25 MR. McMAHON: Thank you, Your Honor.

1 THE COURT: Hang on before you speak. Is there
2 anyone else who wishes to speak in connection with the motion?
3 Okay, I'll hear a reply.

4 MR. WEISBROD: Thank you, Your Honor. Stephen
5 Weisbrod for the borrowers. Debtors' counsel emphasized 6 several times that in his view there was no evidence, his 7 word, of material claims on the part of the borrowers. The 8 Court can take judicial notice and the debtors have admitted 9 that there are at least 450, approximately, claims by owners.
10 Those claims are, obviously, material at least to the 11 borrowers if not to the debtor. Many times they're seeking 12 rescission of mortgages that can make the difference between 13 keeping their homes or not, and I'm going to get to below the 14 question of whether rescission is really at issue here. They 15 have setoff claims. The damages may be low in these cases, 16 they may settle for next to nothing compared to a big 17 securities case, but $10,000 or $20,000 is a lot of money to 18 somebody who is three months behind on his or her mortgage 19 payment. These claims are very material to the people who are 20 seeking the appointment of a committee. Now, the debtors' 21 counsel also stated that in his understanding in the other 22 cases involving lots of tort claims, and I don't want to get 23 into a debate about whether 450 is mass tort or just many 24 torts, but in lots of cases he says, If there's an 25 acknowledgment, there's liability. Actually, in Burns & Row

1 (phonetical), which is pending, I represent the asbestos
2 claimants as insurance counsel there, there's never been a 3 verdict against Burns & Roe. Federal Mogul, Armstrong, et 4 cetera, they always argue that they should not be liable, and 5 in most of these cases, there's no allegation that every 6 product that the debtor sold contained asbestos or that every 7 person who bought the product injured somebody. In all of 8 these cases, same with the hospital cases, where some patients 9 assert malpractice claims, most don't, you're dealing with a 10 subset of people who claim that the debtor's liable for some 11 wrongful conduct. Now, that's the case here, whether or not 12 there's actually been a verdict. It's true that there's no 13 uniformity among the plaintiffs, but you don't need that in 14 order to form a committee. Now, it's also been observed that 15 there's no class. I think Your Honor is correct that you
16 don't need a class under Federal Rule of Civile Procedure 23 17 in order to find that people have sufficiently similar 18 interests in order to have a committee formed. In fact, in 19 most tort cases, there is not a class. There are a lot of 20 individual claims. Sometimes people lose sight of that 21 because, say, in asbestos you can have one lawyer representing 22 thousands of claimants. That's not the case here, but they 23 still have similar interests. Now, we - and I want to repeat 24 this, we do not impugn the integrity of committee members or 25 the committee law firms, and we are not saying that they have

1 breached their fiduciary duties. We're not taking a position
2 at all on how well they've done their job. We're not going to 3 try to go back and look at everything they've done in their 4 efforts to generally maximize the value of the estate. We 5 have no reason to doubt it. Our point is simply that in terms 6 of protecting the interests of borrowers, the interest of 7 borrowers in estate assets, and the interest of borrowers on 8 how the estate is administrated, they're not getting the job 9 done. These borrowers may all be of the same priority as 10 other unsecured creditors, but they can't be treated exactly 11 the same way and that's why a different committee is needed 12 here. Now, I've heard a few times that we, according to 13 debtors' counsel and committee counsel, there really are only 14 two issues, and I'm never quite sure what those two issues are 15 supposed to be, but let me make this absolutely clear. On the 16 plan alone we asserted eight different problems, and only one 17 of those has been addressed properly. One of them has been 18 addressed improperly, and I want to answer the Court's 19 question about the injunction. The parties protected under 20 the plan injunction, as we understood it, were a narrow group:
21 the debtors, the plan trustee, the POC, the trust. But, if a 22 mortgage is still held by one of those - sorry, if the 23 mortgage is not still held by one of those, if the mortgage 24 has been sold and some other servicer is seeking to foreclose, 25 a borrower is precluded under the current version of the plan

1 from suing the trust or any of the other protected parties.
2 So, if Citibank, say, held the loan and Citibank was servicing 3 the loan and tried to foreclose, a borrower, it is correct, 4 Mr. Brady is right, could still bring Citibank into Court.
5 What the borrower couldn't do is bring the trust into Court.
6 That's what I was intending to convey to Your Honor this 7 morning. Now, we have repeatedly pointed out that it is 8 almost impossible for a borrower to know how his or her claim 9 would be treated. Mr. Brady said up here that a borrower upon 10 getting relief from stay, which would be generally deemed to 11 have occurred, could sue in a court of competent jurisdiction.
12 That's not what the plan actually says. It says that the 13 claim has to be brought in the Bankruptcy Court. The claim 14 would be allowed under an order by Your Honor or another 15 bankruptcy judge. Maybe that is what Mr. Brady intended, that 16 anybody could sue in any court of competent jurisdiction, but 17 the plan doesn't say that right now. I want to emphasize why 18 this matters and why recision really is an issue and the other 19 non-monetary relief really is an issue. Number one, the 20 debtor still owns many mortgages. So as to those, it's 21 clearly an issue. As to the mortgages that have been sold, 22 and most have, under TILA, and we write this in every brief
23 and opposing counsels ignore it, a finding of some TILA
24 violations against the originator is binding on the successor
25 owners. So, it matters. A borrower actually can get recision

1 that applies to the successor owners by defeating the trust in 2 court on TILA issues. It matters, and the fact that the plan, 3 even after our motion continues to allow the trustee to 4 destroy any documents, that means in its discretion, makes 5 this doubly problematic because the evidence that a borrower 6 would try to marshal in such a case could well disappear. On 7 the notice issue, Your Honor, we've got a false dichotomy
8 going on in this Court between all borrowers on the one hand 9 and the narrow set of borrowers who said at the time the 10 petition was filed that they wanted to sue. The debtor could 11 have given notice to all borrowers who were subject to 12 foreclosure proceedings; it didn't. The debtor could have 13 given notice to all borrowers who got teaser rates; and they 14 didn't. The debtors could have given notice to all borrowers
15 who had payment option arms; and they didn't. Now, there's no 16 dispute that the debtor sold these types of products which 17 often result in tort claims. There's no dispute about that.
18 They definitely and they have admitted this, sold payment 19 option arm products and products with teaser rates, and the 20 Court can take judicial notice of that, having presiding over 21 these cases. Your Honor made a comment which is actually 22 accurate that the motion - I don't mean to suggest that others
23 weren't, but I just want to make clear that we're not hiding 24 the fact that the idea of appointing a Borrowers Committee is 25 a lawyer idea, and in fact, I mentioned it in a casual

1 conversation with somebody at a public interest organization.
2 I don't think Tilton Jack or Paula Rush or any of the other 3 dozen borrowers should be faulted with not being familiar with 4 § 1102. When you're dealing in particular with consumer 5 advocacy issues, it's usually public interest organizations or 6 law firms acting pro bono that take the lead on these things, 7 that try to come up with a strategy because we're not dealing 8 with sophisticated people who can do it themselves. And so, 9 we're not embarrassed at all about the fact that actually 10 Zuckerman Spaeder and we each independently have been talking 11 to consumer organizations, and we know each other anyway, and 12 at that point the consumer organizations ran with it. So we 13 never actually solicited any borrowers. They came to us 14 through legal aid offices, but that's how it happened.
15 There's nothing to hide about that. That's a good thing.
16 That's what separates this case from, say, New Century where 17 there aren't 363(o) provisions, no one asked for a Borrowers
18 Committee.

19 THE COURT: That's nothing different is it than the 20 cattle call show we have at every Creditors Committee 21 formation meeting when you've got 40 groups of lawyers in 22 there in effect soliciting business from a newly created 23 entity that isn't required to hire an attorney.

24 MR. WEISBROD: There is some similarity and I think 25 that, you know, I work for a for-profit law firm so I don't

1 disparage people who go out and try to generate business, and 2 in fact we would be seeking payment if we were appointed as 3 counsel for a Borrowers Committee here, but I do want to 4 stress that when you're dealing with public interest 5 organizations, the impetus for this is even more important.
6 Lawyers have to be creative and proactive in this regard 7 because the people they protect won't do it themselves.

8 THE COURT: Right.

9 MR. WEISBROD: And, Your Honor, I want to talk about 10 the limited role that the Borrowers Committee would have in 11 our view if we went forward with a Borrowers Committee. The 12 Borrowers Committee would not be seeking to do all the things 13 that you normally have a committee look into, preference 14 actions, that sort of thing, but there are some issues on 15 which borrower interests and interest of general unsecured 16 creditors diverge, and on those issues, a Borrowers Committee 17 would be active, that would principally focus, I think, on the 18 plan and the disclosure statement in the event that there were 19 some kind of third party claim that no other entity could 20 pursue due to conflicts, a Borrowers Committee conceivably can 21 be asked to do that. That's what happened in First Alliance.
22 But, the suggestion that a Borrowers Committee's role should 23 be narrow is one that the borrowers completely understand and 24 accept, and we think it would be appropriate to go forward on 25 that basis. If the Court has any questions, I'd be happy to 1 answer them.

2 THE COURT: No, I don't. Mr. Brady, yeah -

3 MR. BRADY: Just a couple of points.

4 THE COURT: Sure, I'll keep it going, that's fine.

5 MR. BRADY: Just a couple of points, Your Honor.

6 One, we can't stress enough that there's no evidence before 7 the Court in counsel's presentation. I ask Your Honor to take 8 judicial notice of a number of things, but typically that's 9 the result of having failed to put on a case and evidence, and 10 the movants have failed to do that here. The reference was 11 made to Federal Mogul and Dow and how in those instances there 12 has not been a judgment necessarily with respect to liability.
13 Your Honor, Federal Mogul and Dow filed bankruptcy because of 14 the claims being asserted against them, because of the tort 15 claims. American Home did not file bankruptcy because of 16 borrower claims against it. It filed bankruptcy for a host of 17 reasons I don't need to go into now, but the claims of 18 borrowers against American Home did not drive this filing.
19 Recision, Your Honor, much has been made about whether the 20 Borrower Committee, if appointed, could in some way impact the 21 ability of borrowers to obtain recision. Again, Your Honor, 22 virtually all of the loans are sold or in the case of the Bank 23 of America collateral, control's been turned over to Bank of 24 America, pursuant to a settlement approved by the Court. The 25 debtor would have no ability to address those. Really, the

1 only pool of loans that remains are in connection with the JPM 2 facility and that's the subject of a motion for relief from 3 stay. Counsel indicated that a TILA finding by a court, a 4 violation of TILA could be binding on a successor. Well, 5 again, nothing that's happened in the bankruptcy or in the 6 plan would impact that. The 363(o) protections were in the 7 orders entered by this Court and they've now been added to the 8 plan. With respect to destruction of documents, a number of 9 hearings have been held before this Court where the debtor has 10 taken great pains and at great expense protected and preserved 11 the files that needed to remain. We have changed the plan to 12 indicate that the Trustee no longer has the unilateral right 13 to destroy documents. That must be on notice and a hearing 14 before this Court. Counsel indicates that AHM could have 15 served all borrowers who had teaser rates or all borrowers who 16 had option arms because, their position is, those often 17 resulted in tort claims. There is no evidence, Your Honor, 18 before the Court that borrowers who were the subject of teaser 19 rates or who purchased option arms that the generation of 20 claims from those products was higher than any other product.
21 There's just no evidence before the Court. Again, we've 22 removed the debtors from the injunction. We have clarified 23 the exculpation provisions to provide that we are not in any 24 way attempting by this plan to impact borrowers' rights with 25 respect to third parties. And with respect to the liquidation

1 of their claims, they really have an option, Your Honor. A 2 number have come forward and sought relief from stay. Your 3 Honor has granted it in each and every instance. I expect 4 Your Honor would continue to grant borrowers' requests for 5 relief from stay. So the borrower may litigate their claims 6 in a court of competent jurisdiction or if they choose, they 7 can attempt to litigate their claims in effect through the 8 claims administration process here. The borrowers have those 9 options, but the fact is, if a borrower wants to have their 10 claim litigated and resolved in a court of competent 11 jurisdiction that may be more convenient to them, that option 12 exists, and Your Honor, I'm sure, would prefer to have those 13 litigated elsewhere. So, the plan does not do anything to 14 prevent a borrower from being able to exercise their rights 15 both against the debtors to liquidate their claims and against 16 third parties.

17 THE COURT: Thank you, Mr. Brady. Anyone else? Mr.
18 Indelicato?

19 MR. INDELICATO: Yes, Your Honor, very briefly. I 20 just want to address one other thing, and this I would like to 21 just inject a little bit of reality into the proceeding 22 because we are counsel to the liquidating trust in New 23 Century, and as they mentioned, if there is a TILA violation 24 asserted against a trust, it can be binding on the successor.
25 Your Honor, in every case in which we are representing the

1 post-confirmation committee or trustee in a subprime mortgage 2 or all-day mortgage lender, we worked hard to alleviate from 3 the Court and the system the foreclosure proceedings. So both 4 in New Century and Resume in which we're counsel and I think 5 one other, we've had submitted to the Court orders for blanket 6 relief from the stay so that there no longer needs to be 7 relief from the stay to proceed with foreclosure proceedings, 8 and we've assured both the borrowers and the owners of the 9 mortgages that that will be dealt with in a court of competent 10 jurisdiction outside the jurisdiction of the Bankruptcy Court 11 and all rights are preserved.

12 THE COURT: Have you granted blanket release from the 13 automatic stay for borrower claims against the estate?

14 MR. INDELICATO: Well, Your Honor, they're subject to 15 the claims resolution process -

16 THE COURT: So, no.

17 MR. INDELICATO: So the answer is no, we're dealing 18 with them in a claims resolution process.

19 THE COURT: Well, how is that at all relevant to the 20 formation of a Borrowers Committee?

21 MR. INDELICATO: Well, Your Honor -

22 THE COURT: If you've helped the banks?

23 MR. INDELICATO: I'm just dealing with the issue that 24 they raised about the need for recision and the ability to sue 25 the trustee. What you would be creating is a potential where

1 the liquidating trustee is going to be sued throughout the 2 country and you're going to increase enormously the costs of 3 the post-confirmation estate. That's the only point I want to 4 raise. It goes into the reality of the relief they're seeking 5 in the plan, which is what I said before is, they have 6 unsecured claims and they have rights against third parties.
7 Those rights against third parties cannot be adjudicated in 8 this proceeding.

9 THE COURT: Well, you basically want me to prejudge 10 the points that they're raising as a basis.

11 MR. INDELICATO: I'm only responding to their 12 argument, Your Honor. I didn't raise an - I'm just putting a 13 counter argument to why they need the Borrowers Committee to 14 negotiate that in the plan.

15 THE COURT: All right.

16 MR. INDELICATO: I'm not asking the Court to prejudge 17 anything.

18 THE COURT: All right, so your point is, it's not a 19 valid basis for forming a committee because in all likelihood 20 - Well, it would be incredibly expensive.

21 MR. INDELICATO: That's correct, Your Honor. Thank 22 you.

23 THE COURT: Thank you. Anything further by any 24 party? Just give me a moment. All right. Well, I appreciate 25 the argument. I am somewhat troubled by the lack of evidence,

1 but I think the Court can make a decision one way or the other
2 based on, frankly, its experience in this case and the facts
3 and circumstances that have come to the Court's attention over 4 the last 14 months. I'm going to stress that I think the 5 movants have said several times that they were not in any way
6 criticizing counsel for the Committee or the Committee itself
7 and that they simply were taking a position that the Committee 8 in effect was inherently conflicted or did not have 9 sufficiently in front of it the issues that were unique to the 10 borrowers and as a result, not because the Committee wasn't 11 doing their job but because of inherent difficulties, they 12 weren't adequately representing the borrowers. I agree. And 13 again, with no personal or professional criticism of anybody 14 involved on behalf of the Committee. I don't believe that the 15 borrowers who are asserting claims against the debtor in this 16 estate are adequately represented by the Creditors Committee 17 or by themselves. Based on the unique nature of a number of 18 the borrower claims that are different, obviously since 19 they're unique, but to be specific, different from the general 20 nature of the claims of most of the unsecured creditors, most 21 of whom are financial institutions, I think there are 22 fundamental distinctions between those claims. The numerosity 23 of the claimants, even 450, is a large number of claimants, 24 and I think, frankly, that the universe of claims may be 25 larger, but I don't think I need to get into that because I

1 think 450 claims is a lot of claims, a lot of claimants, and 2 frankly, I think the majority of these people are appearing 3 pro se. It is extremely difficult for any person to appear 4 pro se in court. Ms. Rush, in particular, has done a very 5 good job doing her best to navigate the complexities of the 6 Bankruptcy Code. I've seen attorneys with 20 years experience
7 in other fields come into Bankruptcy Court and not do as good 8 a job because this is a complex and often byzantine to what my 9 old law firm used to call the real lawyers, but it is a very 10 specialized area of the law and a pro se person with a 11 sophisticated issue is inherently at a disadvantage, and I 12 think it's just common sense that the vast majority of these 13 people are financially unable to hire counsel, and we're 14 talking about people who are on the verge of losing their 15 homes, and I think the Court can take notice of that, both the 16 increase in home ownership rates in the last five years from 17 something like 62 to 69 percent and the inherent problems that 18 have resulted from that. Going through the discretionary 19 matters, I think, frankly, all of them except maybe for a few 20 support formation of the Committee. Clearly this is a 21 sophisticated large complex case. I don't find the motion at 22 all untimely based on the facts and circumstances of this 23 case. I'm cognizant of how delay would be expensive and 24 requiring additional interaction with a committee that is 25 formed will increase the claims of Mr. Brady's firm, of Mr.

1 Indelicato's firm and other firms that are getting paid from 2 the estate, but I think I have to balance that against the 3 potential upside, and I think the Court, as I indicated, can 4 fashion a remedy that would, while not eliminating that 5 expense, hopefully limit it significantly. Yes, it will 6 result in a delay in confirmation. Now, we're 14 months into 7 a liquidating case. I'm not moved by delaying confirmation 8 whatsoever other than the issue of a continued expense, which 9 I just dealt with. Again, I don't feel that by virtue of the 10 way it was formed and the uniqueness of the borrowers' claims 11 that the Committee adequately can represent these interests 12 and the individuals are not in a position to represent their 13 own interests, and again, I think, there may be - and this 14 goes to this issue about the Committee being able to represent 15 these people, I think there are a potential for unique 16 remedies on behalf of the borrowers, and, you know, the 17 disclosure statement and plan are complex, not just the case, 18 but the issues in front of borrowers are complex, and they 19 have to be because it's a complex company and it's a complex 20 plan, but it inherently makes it difficult for unsophisticated 21 people familiar with the Bankruptcy Code to figure out what's 22 going on. I've read plans. I'm not saying it's this plan.
23 I've read plans and when I get to the seventh cross-indexed
24 definition I don't know what's going on any more, not that I'm 25 brilliant, but I've been doing this for awhile. All right, so

1 here's what I'm going to do. I'm going to direct Mr.
2 McMahon's office to appoint a trustee - excuse me, to appoint 3 a committee of borrowers. The U.S. Trustee always has 4 discretion in forming a committee both in how it does it and 5 who it puts on it, and I want to emphasize that I think this 6 case presents probably the most challenging committee 7 formation meeting in my experience, and I understand that.
8 I'm going to give the U.S. Trustee's Office very, very broad 9 discretion. Certainly, I don't feel that serving 1.5 million 10 people with notice of a borrower formation meeting would be 11 appropriate or required. I'll leave it to you, Mr. McMahon, 12 and your office whether it's filed borrower claims, the 13 current claims of 450 people, publication notice at the 14 debtors' expense, however you want to work with the debtor to 15 figure it out. I'm going to give your office the broadest 16 possible discretion in how you do that. And again, I mean the 17 way that works is, if somebody's got an issue with it, they 18 can bring it to the Court's attention and we'll deal with it 19 then. I'm not at this time going to reschedule the disclosure 20 statement, and I am not at this time going to put any 21 limitations on counsel to a Borrowers Committee, not because I 22 may not do that, but because until we have counsel to that - 23 until we have a Committee and the Committee can have proposed 24 counsel, I'm really not in a position to deal adequately with 25 what the limitations might be. So, we have a hearing in this

1 matter two weeks from today at 10 a.m. At that time I'm going 2 to hold a status conference in connection with the formation 3 of the Borrowers Committee. I would hope that a Committee is 4 formed and has proposed counsel by then. Even if they don't, 5 I will deal with the issues of scope of work, possible
6 limitations on fees and timing. I will schedule a disclosure
7 statement hearing on the 22nd, and I will not move it again
8 without the consent of the primary parties. This case does 9 need to move forward, but I think a Borrowers Committee needs 10 sufficient funds and sufficient time to have a reasonable say 11 in what appears before the Court. So, I'd ask counsel who 12 filed the motion simply to enter a fairly bland order 13 directing the Office of the U.S. Trustee to appoint a 14 committee of borrowers pursuant to - for the reasons set forth 15 on the record at the hearing. I think that's all we need.
16 Any questions? Obviously, the disclosure statement is 17 adjourned without date but a date will be set in two weeks, on 18 the 22nd of October. I think we have a 10 a.m. hearing that 19 day. At least that's what my schedule shows. It's an 20 omnibus. Is that right? Okay, that's right. Any questions.
21 All right, thank you very much. I appreciate the -

22 MS. ROMERO (TELEPHONIC): Your Honor, I have a 23 clarification question. This is Martha Romero on the phone 24 representing the California taxing authorities.

25 THE COURT: Yes, ma'am.

1 MS. ROMERO (TELEPHONIC): The scheduled hearing that 2 you just mentioned on October 22nd at 10 a.m. is just for the 3 purpose of setting a new date for the disclosure hearing?

4 THE COURT: It will not -

5 MS. ROMERO (TELEPHONIC): I mean, one of the matters 6 is to schedule a new date for the disclosure hearing?

7 THE COURT: Yes. The disclosure hearing itself will 8 not go forward on October 22nd.

9 MS. ROMERO (TELEPHONIC): Okay, and that hearing's 10 at 10 a.m.

11 THE COURT: Ten a.m. Eastern, yes, ma'am.

12 MS. ROMERO (TELEPHONIC): Okay, thank you so much.

13 THE COURT: You're welcome. Any other questions?
14 Okay, thank you, the hearing's adjourned.

15 (Whereupon at 12:06 p.m., the hearing in this matter 16 was concluded for this date.)
